Advising sophisticated financial institutions and growth businesses on transactions where legal execution, regulatory discipline and commercial speed must converge.

Complex mandates. Clear execution.

Berhudan Hüseyin Sayim advises financial institutions, technology businesses and corporate decision-makers on matters where transaction execution, regulatory discipline and commercial judgment must operate together. His practice is centred on cross-border financing and markets documentation, complex technology and commercial contracting, and governance and data-privacy frameworks. He has acted as primary counsel on high-volume, time-critical mandates spanning lending, derivatives, trade and receivables finance, cash management and secured transactions, while also guiding fast-growth businesses through commercial scaling, founder/investor arrangements and KVKK implementation.

His advisory philosophy is execution-led: identify the risk that matters, structure a workable path through it, and deliver documentation that is legally resilient, operationally usable and commercially proportionate.
